Death in the Stock Market

Mr. Gould's Fortune Estimated to Be Not Less than One Hundred Million Dollars.

Jay Gould, the famous financier and railroad magnate, died at his home, 570 Fifth Avenue, at 9.15 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Gould's death was apparently painless. He was conscious at the last, and his bedside was surrounded by all the members of his family.

Mr. Gould died in a room on the second floor of his home in the extension in the rear of the building, just over the conservatory, the same room in which his wife died.

Although the event was not unexpected, the public had been prepared for the news by the publication in yesterday's EVENING WORLD of the fact of his critical illness, the announcement that the end had come, created intense excitement among business men all over the city.

The direct cause of Mr. Gould's death is said to have been exhaustion caused by his efforts to save the stricken, of whom he is reported to have had three. The first was Thanksgiving day, the next two days later, and the third last Wednesday. His children made no hope of his recovery yesterday afternoon.

Although the event was not unexpected, the public had been prepared for the news by the publication in yesterday's EVENING WORLD of the fact of his critical illness, the announcement that the end had come, created intense excitement among business men all over the city.

At the same time a bulletin announcing the fact of Mr. Gould's death was posted in the Western Union building.

For fully twenty minutes after this report was made at Mr. Gould's house were received confirmation of the report.

Undertaker John Mann's wagon was driven up to the Gould residence at 10.35 this forenoon. Dr. George Munn, the physician of Mr. Gould's church, was assisted by Rev. Dr. Paxton, pastor of the church, at which Mr. Gould was an attendant.

The presence of this wagon confirmed beyond doubt the present death, and a number of persons gathered on the street and stood before the curtained windows.

The undertaker's assistants after cut a large ragged opening with black cloth and carried it into the house.

MR. GOULD'S LAST HOURS.

His Children and His Physician
Watched at His bedside.

From information given out at the residence of Jay Gould, 570 Fifth Avenue, it is known that it was evident that the great man had rapidly nearing death so rapidly, in fact, that the end was merely a question of hours.

Yesterday's EVENING WORLD told of the steady increase in the alarming symptoms of his illness, which was said to be hemorrhage of the stomach, although Dr. Munn, his attending physician, declined to make public any particulars regarding the sufferer's complaint.

At 9 o'clock last night the butler at the front door of the Gould residence came to warn him, saying that Mr. Gould was resting quietly. There is nothing more.

Colonel Huntington drove up to the house at 9.30 and, sighting at the door, inquired as to the condition of Mr. Gould.

When told that the great financier was dead, he reentered his carriage. An EVENING WORLD reporter caught him as he was leaving and asked what effect, in his opinion, Mr. Gould's death would have on Wall street affairs. His reply was:

"At 8 o'clock last evening it was said that Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton, of the West Presbyterian Church, where Mr. Gould attends services, called at the sick man's bedside, but

A Spasm from a Tramp's Pipe is Believed to Have Started the Fire in the Tenement at 319
Flushing Avenue, Brooklyn, which resulted Early This Morning in the Death of one Person and the Injury of five others.

The tramp, whose name is Michael Monahan,
was arrested.

Following is a list of the dead and injured:

The Dead.

Michael Doyle, aged forty, collector for Michael Brothers lumber yard, killed by jumping.

The Injured.

Willie Doyle, aged four, overseer by night at Eastern District Hospital.

Felix Murray, aged thirty-five, longshoreman, and his wife, Mary, and their

Annie Murray, aged eleven, overseer by Hospital, was severely burned.

Her son, Felix Murray, aged twelve, at Homewood Hospital.

Her daughter, Helen, aged ten, at 319 Flushing

From the cedar the blaze jumped through the three stories to the garret above Thomas Murray could alight the garments when they had nearly reached his room.

The Mayor himself gave a large tract of land, and it is claimed that he has been its owner since 1870. It is believed that it was he who sold the land to the tramp, who is now accused of maintaining nuisances.

The Mayor's son, William, was born in Brooklyn.
